

Dear FERC staff,

I'm writing to comment on the Feasibility Study Report filed by the Two Basin Partnership for the Potter Valley Project.

This project matters to me because I care about the Eel River and its fisheries.

Removing Scott Dam is clearly appropriate. The dam blocks all fish passage. It appears to have a number of serious safety issues. There is no alternative owner willing to assume the apparently significant liabilities and costs of relicensing and maintaining Scott Dam.

PG&E has benefitted from ownership of Scott and Cape Horn Dams for nearly a century. PG&E should bear the cost and responsibility for Scott Dam removal, and removal or modification of Cape Horn Dam as necessary to provide fish passage. The costs of providing Eel River water to Russian River interests should be borne by those who benefit from the water.

The Forest Service has asked for a 45 day extension on comments on the Feasibility Study Report and I think that is reasonable.

Sincerely,
